AUTHOR OF

February 3rd 2012 7:00 pm Bell Performing Arts Centre

The prevailing practice is to take what works with older children and to apply them to the younger set. Dr. Neufeld reveals the pitfalls of this strategy, especially regarding such common methods as warnings, consequences and time-outs. According to Neufeld, our methods must be informed by how young brains work and by what is required for healthy development to occur. Dr. Neufeld will provide alternative strategies that are both effective and developmentally safe with young children.
