

Foundations of Multisensory Structured Language

The Foundations of MSL (Multisensory Structured Language) course is a much anticipated bridge to link information for educators. Our training course will provide the tools necessary to better understand the student with dyslexia and the MSL approaches used to teach these learners.

Participants will be able to use the valuable information provided to better equip them in an educational setting and to serve as a foundational knowledge base to prepare for or enhance Orton-Gillingham training.

After taking this course, learners will be able to:

- Summarize the student with dyslexia or a learning disability.
- Identify early signs for struggling learners and those at risk of learning difficulties
- Distinguish MSL Instructional methods
- Generalize Complexities of the English Language
- Classify terminology used in MSL teaching

This course will also serve as a valuable professional development to Orton-Gillingham practitioners seeking to expand on their understanding of dyslexia and the evolution of MSL approaches.

Graduates of the Foundations course will have gained a more insightful understanding of the different learning needs of students in their classrooms and how to best identify, accommodate, and support those students for success.

This course would appeal to all individuals wanting to deepen their understanding of O-G and the way MSL helps learners. Classroom teachers, learning assistant teachers, learning support teachers or assistants, administrators and remedial tutors will all benefit from the information provided in the Foundations of MSL course.
